

Problem: I need peer-reviewed, full-text articles in Nursing. What should I do?

Solution: Try one of our specialized full-text databases!

This means one-stop shopping for high-quality research materials.

CINAHL, MEDLINE, and PSYCINFO are also available at our library. They are not full-text resources, but they are much more comprehensive databases. Ask a librarian about these resources, too.

The databases that will help you most are:

- Health Reference Center Academic
- Expanded Academic Index
- ProQuest Health Management
- EBSCO CINAHL Plus
- EBSCO Health Source- Consumer

Why so many databases? The answer is simple:

- The indexers for each database describe the articles differently
- The number of journals and dates of coverage vary
- The total number of articles and the amount of full text vary, too
- Information is a business. These companies are in competition for your patronage!

Find a Full-text journal article in Health Reference Center Academic

All of these resources are available from the DATABASES area of our website:

<http://lib.newpaltz.edu>

To locate other databases by subject, use the SELECT AN AREA TO RESEARCH areas of our website. Find a citation, but it's not in full text? Be sure to check Serials Solution to see if the article is available online. And check the STL online catalog to locate the journal in our print collection!
